Quarterly Fund Manager Review

Money markets were quiet at the beginning of the third quarter, with the market pricing in little prospect of any change to bank rate. But, at the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee (MPC) meeting on 5 August, the committee noted growing inflationary pressures with less emphasis on them being transitory. The MPC acknowledged that some modest tightening of policy would likely be necessary. The market reacted and the probability of a bank rate hike by the June 2022 meeting jumped from 60% to 90%. Markets went quiet again with short rates unchanged until the next MPC meeting in late September. Following this, members agreed that any tightening of policy would be implemented via the bank rate "even if that tightening became appropriate before the end of the existing UK government bond asset purchase programme". The market reacted strongly, and with further evidence of inflationary pressures since, the probability of a bank rate hike by the February 2022 meeting, which had started the third quarter at 18%, ended the quarter at 93%.
