Quarterly Fund Manager Review

The Fund generated a positive return, net of fees, during the quarter. It was ahead of its benchmark. Strong stock selection in communication services, materials and industrials drove relative returns. However, stock selection in financials weighed significantly. The overall impact of sector allocation was negligible over the quarter. With investors expecting strong growth in electric vehicle sales this year, Lithium miner Albemarle continued to contribute positively to relative performance. Sony performed well as Japanese stocks rallied on political developments in the country. Elsewhere, Playstation Showcase 2021 saw a positive reaction from the market, while the listing of Vivendi's Universal Music Group may have also helped investors to better gauge the value of Sony's own music business. Alphabet, the parent company of Google, contributed strongly as the company issued a good set of second quarter results. Meanwhile, short-term market worries around the semiconductor cycle hampered shares in Applied Materials following a period of strong performance. However, such concerns were not borne out in another robust set of results for the quarter. We received shares in Universal Music Group following its spinout from Vivendi. We purchased Cooper Cos, a global leader in the contact lens market and continued to add to TE Connectivity, a leader in the connector industry. We increased the holding in Swiss pharmaceutical giant Roche and made a slight increase to General Electric. On the other hand, we exited the small position in Meituan at the beginning of the quarter, thereby reducing the Fund's exposure to China where government actions had continued to weigh. We exited the relatively small holding in Merck and reinvested the proceeds into two of our more favoured names in the health care sector: Roche and Cooper Cos. We took some profit in global speciality chemicals company Albemarle following a strong run for the shares. With Continental's restructuring delayed, we reduced the position. Although we believed Alphabet's valuation continued to look reasonable given its strong structural growth prospects, we felt it prudent to reduce the Fund's sizeable holding following a good run for the shares.
