Quarterly Fund Manager Review

In April, The UK's construction PMI returned to growth as housebuilding picked up. But commercial activity and civil engineering continued to decline. UK manufacturers' exports also fell as demand from the US, Europe and China fell. The rush to stockpile raw materials in time for Brexit, now delayed until 31 October, also began to fade. A small rise in the UK service sector PMI failed to offset falling output in the manufacturing and construction sector during May, leaving the economy close to stagnation. Service sector PMI grew to a three-month high of 51, up from 50.4 in April, due to a rise in domestic orders, but a year-long slump in exports persisted. In June, the Bank of England's Monetary Policy Committee revised down its economic forecasts, anticipating flat growth for Q2 rather than a 0.2% rise. This reflected an easing of stock building ahead of Brexit deadlines. Figures for May showed that inflation had fallen to its 2% target, easing pressure on the Bank to raise rates to keep prices under control. It voted to maintain interest rates at 0.75%. Prime Minister Theresa May announced she would step down on 7 June. This amplified uncertainty around Brexit and increased the likelihood of the UK leaving the bloc without a deal, or a further delay to the departure. Most Conservative MPs are believed to be opposed to a no-deal Brexit, but grassroots members are perceived to be most likely to support leaving without a deal. The race to replace her reached its final stage in June, with two candidates left to contest the leadership. Front runner Boris Johnson said the UK will leave the EU "come what may" by November.
