Quarterly Fund Manager Review

Against a mixed economic backdrop, equities in the UK enjoyed a positive fourth quarter of 2017. Both the FTSE 100 and mid-cap FTSE 250 indices reached new highs at year end, as investors were encouraged by a long-awaited breakthrough in the Brexit negotiations between the UK and the European Union. The two sides reached consensus on a financial arrangement, which sets the stage for trade talks to begin in earnest in the new year. Inflation rose to 3.1%, the highest level in six years and far exceeding the Bank of England's (BoE) target level of 2.0%. Much of this, however, was attributable to the relative value of the pound. The nation's economic growth, as measured by GDP, was sluggish at 1.7% year over year for the third quarter, and the Office of Budget Responsibility revised its growth forecasts for 2017 to 1.5%, down from March's estimate of 2.0%, because of lower productivity. The IMF also lowered its growth estimates, given the uncertainty around Brexit. Unemployment remained low during the quarter, while manufacturing orders spiked to a 30-year high. For the first time since the global financial crisis, the BoE voted to increase the cost of borrowing, raising the benchmark lending rate to 0.5%. Citing the combination of low unemployment and high inflation, BoE Governor Mark Carney signalled that rates would rise only gradually as the inflation rate starts to move lower towards the 2% target.
