Quarterly Fund Manager Review

The fund returned 13.4%, while the index returned 9.6% over the quarter. Strong stock picking in the health care sector and an overweight position in the communication services sector boosted performance. Conversely, the fund's overweight position in the materials sector and selected industrials stocks held back gains. The fund's position in e-commerce giant Amazon advanced, driven by strong Q3 results and upgraded guidance. Enterprise SaaS company Salesforce added value, upgrading full year guidance, supported by a strong order pipeline. The fund's lack of exposure to pharmaceuticals company Eli Lilly proved rewarding as shares dropped after downbeat Q3 results, attributed to weak sales. The holding in mega cap technology company Alphabet advanced on release of strong Q3 results, driven by the growth of its cloud unit and cost discipline. The off-benchmark position in audio streaming service company Spotify advanced, as recent price increases proved unique and underappreciated by the market. Ticketing and promotions company Live Nation Entertainment added value as results beat estimates, underpinned by cost discipline and higher concert prices. The lack of exposure to mega-cap growth companies and AI beneficiaries Tesla and Broadcom detracted from performance. Tesla's shares rose, driven by expectations of a favourable regulatory environment under Trump and news that Hyundai will use Tesla's North American Charging Standard (NACS) adaptors for its electric vehicles. Broadcom rallied following better-than-expected Q3 revenues and robust demand for its custom AI chips.
