Fund Commentary

Global shares surged by over 14% (over 12% in AUD terms) over the June quarter, despite a backdrop of geopolitical tension and economic uncertainty. Investor sentiment improved as military conflict in the Middle East de-escalated, leading to oil prices retreating from their highs and reducing fears of a prolonged inflation shock. At the same time, corporate earnings expectations strengthened, supported by resilient economic activity and continued business investment. A renewed enthusiasm for AI was also apparent.

With the Fund being launched mid-June quarter, initial performance was encouraging.

An emphasis on stocks with higher profitability contributed to relative performance over the period, with the Fund systematically targeting more profitable stocks within the developed markets (ex Australia) large cap universe. On an ongoing basis, the Fund is regularly rebalanced to maintain exposure to businesses with higher expected returns. On that note, significant stocks the Fund has recently added include US technology giants Meta Platforms, Broadcom and Amazon.

Looking ahead, corporate profitability, which tends to be a prime long-term driver of share price appreciation, remains solid, particularly in the US, which should continue to support global markets. The nearer term, as always, is harder to predict, with many believing further volatility to be likely amid sticky inflation and political uncertainty, though of course these concerns could all surprise on the upside. For long-term investors, we believe a diverse basket of businesses, bought at reasonable prices, particularly those with strong competitive advantage that generate high amounts of cash from their shareholders' capital, will serve shareholders well.
