Quarterly manager commentary

Market Update

In 2024, share markets delivered another strong year, supported by easing inflation, steady economic growth, and the initial stages of global interest rate cuts.

While market gains broadened, US and AI-related stocks remained top performers for a second consecutive year, with the "Magnificent 7" stocks continuing to benefit from strong profit margins and investor optimism about their leadership in AI and innovation. The US market delivered positive returns in the December quarter, a period shaped by the Republican clean sweep election result. Promises of deregulation, tax cuts, and tariffs boosted cyclical sectors like banks and technology, while defensive sectors like healthcare and real estate lagged. Tesla stood out as a top performer, with investors anticipating favourable policies for Elon Musk's companies following his support for President-elect Donald Trump during the campaign.

In contrast, the Australian share market ended the year on a softer note but still achieved impressive annual returns. Domestic economic growth remained subdued, making it challenging for Australian companies to increase profits. Consequently, market gains were largely driven by rising valuations (investors paying higher prices for shares) rather than profit growth. Commonwealth Bank of Australia (CBA) was one of the strongest performers over the quarter, with its share price climbing higher despite concerns about its elevated share price.

Meanwhile, the Reserve Bank of Australia (RBA) held the cash rate steady at 4.35%, maintaining its position since November 2023.

Portfolio Update

The portfolio delivered a return of 0.03% over the December quarter.

During the quarter, international shares made the biggest impact on performance, with the iShares Wholesale International Equity Index Fund, which provides a passive exposure to global equities, being a standout contributor. In addition to iShares Wholesale International Equity Index Fund, the iShares Wholesale Australian Listed Property Index Fund - which provides a passive exposure to the Australian property sector - contributed strongly to portfolio returns throughout the year. Additionally, your fixed interest managers, particularly those who invest in high-quality corporate bonds, delivered strong returns over the 12-month period to 31 December 2024.

Portfolio changes during the quarter:

During the quarter, we switched your Alternatives exposure to Winton Global Alpha No. 1 Fund - Class I Units, which offers a far more competitive fee structure compared to the previous manager.

Market Outlook

We anticipate 2025 to be a year of reasonable economic growth, with a likelihood of modest interest rate cuts in the US and Australia. Trump's policy agenda positions US equities to continue to perform well, potentially at the expense of other markets. Market consensus points to modest to high single digit equity returns, with a potential rotation into undervalued assets such as mid and small sized companies. The possibility of a recession remains, particularly if key central banks delay implementing policies to support economic growth in the face of slowing demand or financial stress. Additionally, escalating trade tensions—whether through new tariffs, sanctions, or geopolitical disputes—could disrupt global supply chains and trade activity, further weighing on growth prospects.

Maintaining a diversified portfolio with defensive assets like government bonds, trend-following strategies such as managed futures—which can profit from market downturns—and undervalued growth opportunities like global small companies will help your portfolio navigate evolving market conditions in 2025.
