Quarterly manager commentary

Market Update

Market conditions in early October remained challenging, impacting both stocks and bonds for the third consecutive month. The market downturn persisted as robust US economic data led to higher global bond yields. Oil prices fell, despite potential oil supply risks from the Middle East crisis, indicating concerns about reduced demand. Gold emerged as the best-performing asset, rising amid geopolitical tensions, even with increasing real bond yields. The US dollar strengthened, maintaining its safe-haven status and resilience in the face of overall market decline. Geopolitically, surprise attacks by Hamas on Israel escalated into a war. Additionally, the US 10-year bond yield reached 5%, driven by government debt issuance and better-than-expected US GDP.

November brought a significant turnaround for investors, delivering exceptional gains across global financial markets. The anticipation of substantial Federal Reserve rate cuts in 2024 influenced the positive market sentiment. Meanwhile, the Reserve Bank of Australia raised the cash rate by 25 basis points to a 12-year high of 4.35%. Governor Michele Bullock's post-meeting speech emphasised that despite moderating inflation, it remains persistently high, leaving the possibility of another rate increase open, contingent on future data and evolving risks.

The quarter and year concluded on a high note, with stocks and bonds rallying on eased inflation fears and hopes for a soft landing. With inflation under control and the US economy displaying resilience, investors grew more optimistic about the outlook for 2024 despite growing geopolitical tensions erupting in the Middle East. Federal Reserve Chair Jerome Powell's comments, indicating that most committee members believe rates are at or near the peak and no additional rate hikes are expected in 2024, contributed to this positive sentiment. Investors responded by pricing in 140 basis points of rate cuts by the end of 2024. While global stock markets closed the year positively, the US market played a pivotal role in driving returns, outperforming other regions. Notably, the Australian market lagged behind, as banks, resources, and defensive sectors failed to keep pace with the returns on offer in high-performing global sectors.

Portfolio update

Over the December 2023 quarter, the portfolio delivered a return of 6.70%, outperforming its CPI+4% long term objective by 4.07%.

The top asset class contributors this quarter were Global Equities and Australian Equities.

At a security/Fund level, the Vanguard MSCI Index International Shares ETF (Hedged) and Vanguard Australian Shares High Yield ETF were the largest positive contributors, while the Talaria Global Equity Fund delivered a flat return.

There was one set of portfolio changes made during the quarter. We took advantage of market weakness in early November by adding to equities, funded by excess cash holdings. The only new position was Vanguard MSCI Index International Shares ETF Hedged (VGAD), providing exposure to a potential recovery in global equities and the Australian dollar. We also moderately increased holdings in the Milford Australian Absolute Growth Fund and the Fairlight Global Small & Mid Cap Fund to provide some increased exposure to smaller companies.

Market Outlook

Despite the notable absence of the widely anticipated recession in 2023, our attention remains fixed on potential risks of an economic downturn that could impact major economies and financial markets in 2024. Recent signs of output growth slowdowns in response to tighter monetary policy and rising cost of living pressures are worth noting. Labour markets, while still tight, are gradually easing with declining job vacancies, increasing delinquencies, and a return of personal savings to pre-Covid levels. Central banks have likely delivered the bulk of interest rate hikes this cycle, but the timing and magnitude of rate cuts will be a source of volatility in 2024.

Despite prevailing risks, including ongoing geopolitical tensions, there are opportunities investors can leverage in this uncertain environment. In the bond market our preference leans towards the safety and stability offered by government bonds, expected to exhibit resilience in a potential recession and upside potential when central banks initiate rate cuts. We believe the exceptional equity rally of late 2023 is unlikely to continue due to high valuations and flat earnings growth. Patience is therefore recommended as we climb a new wall of worry and await potential opportunities arising from the onset of a recession and subsequent central bank interventions.
