1 The managed portfolio performance represents total return for the periods. Returns have been calculated using the time-weighted method, they assume distributions are reinvested and are after investment management fees and indirect costs. Total and growth returns include accrued distributions, while income return includes paid distributions only. Returns do not take into account tax payable. Individual client returns may vary based on the contributions, withdrawals, and timing differences within the managed portfolio

Quarterly manager commentary

Market Update

Markets finished the quarter on the same low volatility high return note that we have enjoyed so far this year, brushing off weak data and seeing the positive in the latest inflation and economic data. To put this in context, most diversified portfolios have delivered the kind of returns we might have expected for the whole year in just the first three months of 2024. Geographically, Japan was the standout performer for the entire quarter. Europe showed little volatility, while the US delivered the best returns but with considerably higher volatility, especially among large cap tech stocks.

What had been a very narrow market, dominated by the so-called 'Magnificent 7', has broadened out so far year, with Europe and Japan keeping pace with the Nasdaq early in the quarter and emerging markets, Australia, and the UK joining the party in the last 4 weeks. The Nasdaq has lagged slightly in March due to valuation concerns surrounding the largest tech giants. Long term bond yields have traded in a range between 4% and 4.3% or but hope of lower short-term rates later this year have been consistently pushed out leading to choppy returns from bonds. This seems set to continue with Australian CPI data last week confirming the global trend of stubborn services inflation offset by goods deflation. Then in the US, the highly anticipated Personal Consumption Expenditure Index for February came out in in-line with expectations of 0.3%. In short this again paints a picture of slightly higher for longer inflation and central banks being in less of a hurry to bring rates down. This, along with some more strong industrial activity and inflation data overnight, has pushed yields in the US up to the top of that narrow range again.

Portfolio Update

The InvestSense Diversified portfolio generated positive returns over the first quarter of 2024, despite navigating a complex and sometimes volatile market environment. The portfolio's diversified asset allocation played a key role in managing the various challenges and opportunities presented.

The portfolio rose in January, as International Equities outperformed and Property & Infrastructure underperformed. Once more, the Macquarie Listed Property Fund contributed while the Vanguard Emerging Markets fund detracted. An underweight to Property & Infrastructure benefited returns.

February saw a return, with International Equities leading and Fixed Interest trailing. The Macquarie Listed Property Fund and global equity managers like Ironbark and Vanguard boosted returns, while the U.S. Treasury Bond ETF again detracted. The overweight to International Equities aided performance.

In March, the portfolio saw positive returns, led by Property & Infrastructure while Cash lagged. Security selection detracted value overall, with the Macquarie Listed Property Fund contributing positively and the U.S. Treasury Bond ETF detracting. Asset allocation, particularly the underweight to Cash, added value.

Portfolio changes during the quarter:

Profits have been taken on Australian Real Estate Investment Trusts (A-REITs) due to significant price increases over the last six months. The position has been reduced, with proceeds used to increase exposure to listed infrastructure assets, which offer a more attractive risk/return relationship. In particular, we have reduced the weight of Macquarie True Index Listed Property Fund to below neutral target. These proceeds will be used to correspondingly increase our position in Macquarie True Index Global Infrastructure Fund.

Market Outlook

Looking ahead, the market's trajectory will depend on the interplay between inflation, central bank policies, and economic growth. If the Goldilocks scenario persists, with inflation moderating and growth remaining stable, markets could continue their upward trend. However, any unexpected shocks or signs of a more pronounced economic slowdown could lead to increased volatility and a reassessment of market valuations.
