² Benchmark is based on the Consumer Price Index (CPI) published by the Australian Bureau of Statistics (ABS) as of the current reporting period.

Quarterly manager commentary

Market Update

Equity markets have kicked off 2024 in style with continued momentum from 2023, with strong performance from US and Japanese equity markets. Market participants continue to ignore comments from central banks that rates cuts are being pushed out further, even as data points to CPI being more stubborn than recently believed. Consensus is that the RBA and other central banks in the developed world are now expected to cut interest rates much later this year or even into 2025.

More closely to home, the recent ASX reporting season was quite benign, with many companies commenting that key areas of focus being conscious of costs and exercising caution on balance sheets whilst looking for business growth opportunities.

Equity returns were far from uniform across countries. Japanese stocks rose strongly, while U.K. equities eked out a small gain despite a recession announcement. Performance was similarly divergent across emerging markets; Chinese and Brazilian stocks endured losses while India gained.

From a style perspective, growth and value stocks were virtually neck and neck. Technology and communication-services sectors outperformed, while consumer discretionary stocks lagged due in large part to weakness in the automobile industry. Small companies also struggled versus their larger counterparts, although still delivered positive outcomes for investors.

The market's proclivity for mega-cap stocks continued, with the "Magnificent Seven" dominating performance, although this was heavily swayed by Nvidia, which rose more than 80% in the first quarter. Outside of Nvidia, Tesla was down -27% in the quarter—the worst stock in entire S&P 500. Apple was also down 11%, while Google was up 8% but trailed the broad market. Withstanding these changes, market concentration in the very largest stocks has reached a level not seen since the "nifty-fifty" era of the early 1970's.

Turning to bonds, improving news on the global economy caused yields to inch higher, providing a headwind for fixed income asset classes. Longer-duration bonds underperformed their short-duration counterparts. High-yield bonds were a standout winner among fixed income. Broadly speaking, the US dollar gained value versus most developed- and emerging-market currencies, providing a tailwind for unhedged exposures.

Portfolio changes during the quarter:

Within global equities, the portfolio has benefitted from having more unhedged offshore currency exposure than Australian dollar hedged exposure over the past 12 months and medium-term (three to five years). We think it's prudent to shift some of the portfolio's offshore unhedged global equities exposure towards more Australian dollar hedged assets. The Australian dollar has recently pulled back from its recent heights of 68.5 cents against the US dollar, at the end of December, to be trading at around 65 cents, providing the opportunity for us to increase the Australian dollar currency hedged exposure in our portfolios.

In addition, interest rate sensitive assets have become a little more attractive, which has meant adding a new position in Infrastructure.

With the Japanese stock market being one of the standout performers of 2023, and continuing its strong run into 2024, we have trimmed iShares MSCI Japan ETF (JJP.ASX) as valuations have been less attractive. The market has responded positively to improving corporate governance practices being taken by Japanese companies, and we are pleased to see progress being made, given that corporate governance change forms part of our long-standing investment thesis for Japanese equities.

Although the UK markets still looks attractively valued, we have trimmed BetaShares FTSE 100 ETF (F100.ASX). We remain overweight to the UK equity markets against the portfolio's strategic asset allocation benchmark, but we feel it makes sense to trim this exposure to broaden out the portfolio exposures and shift the portfolio towards more Australian dollar hedged positions. We have increased our exposure to MSTR.ASX (Morningstar International Shares Active ETF), in order to increase the portfolio's exposure to Australian dollar hedged global equities.

We have also initiated a position in iShares Core FTSE Global Infrastructure (AUD Hedged) ETF (GLIN.ASX). We felt now was an opportune time to add infrastructure to the portfolio as this interest rate sensitive asset class has lagged broader equities markets due to dual concerns that rising interest rates will negatively impact valuations and capital market funding costs.

Market Outlook

Looking ahead, market participants are trying to reconcile a few key developments. On one hand, the market backdrop appears favourable, with sentiment improving and corporate earnings rising. On the other hand, central banks may not pursue rate cuts at the speed many hoped, with valuations edging on expensive across many measures. Taken together, we believe a cautionary optimistic stance is warranted, balancing risk and return drivers while selectively identifying pockets of opportunity.
