Quarterly manager commentary

Market Update

Share markets rallied strongly over the March quarter, buoyed by robust economic data and expectations for interest rate cuts in the latter half of 2024.

The Australian share market posted solid gains during the quarter, driven by a better-than-expected domestic reporting season. However, these gains were eclipsed by global markets as lower iron ore prices weighed down the local share market. The Information Technology sector was the standout performer, while Listed Property shares, such as Goodman Group, benefited from improved investor sentiment and having been previously oversold. Australian banks also rose over the quarter thanks to a combination of a resilient economy, signs of a peak in interest rates, and the cautious positioning of investors.

Global shares continued their momentum from last year, with most major share markets reaching record highs. Markets were driven by strong economic data, solid company earnings results, and broad-based optimism that major central banks were still on track to deliver interest rate cuts in 2024. The returns from the so-called "Magnificent Seven" US tech giants were more divergent, with the likes of Nvidia, Meta, and Amazon leading the charge. In contrast, Tesla and Apple struggled off the back of weaker demand for their products.

The head of the RBA mentioned that recent data shows progress in controlling inflation yet decided to keep interest rates steady at 4.35%, with their focus shifting towards considering cutting rates later in the year.

Portfolio Update

The portfolio delivered a return of 6.55% over the past quarter. Early in the quarter we had an overweight to Global IG Credit against Global High Yield Credit. We were expecting modest duration gains from IG and felt that High Yield wasn't factoring in probabilities of recession. We reduced this position midway through the quarter, and upweighted Global Bonds on prospect of US rate cuts.

We held a modest underweight on Australian Large Cap Equities, to consider Bank and Australian household sensitivities to rising interest rates. We remained negative on Global equities due to recession risks early in the quarter but reduced our position as a soft landing became more likely. Alternatively, we upweighted Global Small Cap equities for their attractive valuations and maintained this position the entire quarter. In the expectation of duration gains after an aggressive bond sell off and the likely event of lower bond yields provided reason for strong Global Infrastructure return, so we introduced and held an overweight position for this asset class.

Throughout this quarter, we had a slight overweight to equities and bonds funded by having a underweight in Cash.

Portfolio changes during the quarter:

Decreased Aus Bonds by 3, Increased Global Equities Hedged and Unhedged by 0.75 each, increased Global Infrastructure by 1.5.

Market Outlook

The 'soft-landing' scenario remains our base case, where interest rates are high enough to curb inflation without causing a major recession or a meaningful spike in unemployment. However, economic growth remaining above trend and the durability of household and business savings have led to the prospect of higher rates for a longer period than expected re-emerging as a key risk, rather than a recession. Whilst your portfolios are broadly positioned for our base case, we have also embedded resilience in them, through an increased focus on higher quality assets and targeting areas of the market that we believe are undervalued, such as global smaller companies.
