Quarterly manager commentary

Market Update

Global share markets made strong gains in the December quarter, driven by expectations the world's major central banks will cut interest rates sooner (and faster) than anticipated. In the US, the Federal Reserve (Fed) kept interest rates unchanged throughout the period but shifted to a slightly more dovish stance on monetary policy in December, saying it now expects to lower interest rates by 0.75% in 2024. That's more than the 0.50% it forecast in September. The market, though, moved to price in a far more aggressive rate-cut path, betting that the Fed will lower rates six times, or 1.50%, over the next 12 months; the first of which is expected as early as March. We saw a similar theme in Europe and the UK, with investors betting that easing inflation will see the European Central Bank (ECB) and the Bank of England (BoE) both cut interest rates six times in 2024. The ECB is expected to move first in either March or April, with the BoE seen following in May. Rate cut expectations also contributed to a sharp decline in government bond yields, providing further support for stocks. Australian shares also performed well.

In addition to global rate cut expectations, the local market benefited from speculation domestic interest rates have peaked and a sharp decline in Australian government bond yields.

Both global and domestic bonds made good gains over the period.

Portfolio update

The portfolio achieved strong positive returns in the December quarter. The direct Australian equity portfolio contributed positively to performance over the period. Our global and Australian fixed income exposures also added value, with traditional fixed income assets benefiting from a sharp decline in government bond yields. Australian private credit manager Metrics Credit and the Russell Investments Australian Floating Rate Fund added further value. In contrast, our global equities exposure detracted from benchmark-relative performance; though the asset class did deliver strong absolute returns for the quarter.

The direct Australian equity portfolio outperformed its benchmark, benefiting in part from stock selection within the materials space. This included overweights to James Hardie Industries and iron ore major Fortescue. Stock selection within financials also added value; notably an underweight to QBE Insurance. Stock selection within the information technology sector added further value over the period, including an overweight to WiseTech Global. In contrast, stock selection amongst industrials detracted from overall performance, including overweights to Brambles and Computershare. Partly offsetting these positions was an underweight to engineering services company Worley.

In terms of global equity managers, Japan equity specialist Nissay Asset Management underperformed its benchmark, driven in part by its value bias. Emerging markets specialist Oaktree Capital also underperformed; the manager impacted in part by an ex-benchmark holding in Canadian miner First Quantum Minerals. In contrast, UK equity specialist J O Hambro and Wellington both performed well over the period; the latter benefiting from its growth bias.

With regard to Australian equity managers, the Russell Investments Australian Opportunities Fund (RAOF) underperformed the benchmark. Within RAOF, both Firetrail and L1 Capital's Catalyst strategy underperformed; the latter impacted in part by overweights to oil and gas producer Santos, QBE Insurance and Nickel Industries. In contrast, Platypus performed very strongly; the manager benefiting from overweights to plumbing supplies group Reece Ltd., James Hardie Industries and industrial property giant Goodman Group.

In November, we modestly reduced the portfolio's allocations to Australian and global equities in favour of cash. The recent, strong bounce in Australian and global equities provided an opportunity for us to reduce the overall level of risk within the portfolio. We chose to increase the portfolio's allocation to cash due to the current, relatively attractive yield on offer.

Overall, the managed portfolio is aligned with its long-term asset allocation as we wait patiently for opportunities.

Market Outlook

2023 saw strong returns from both equities and bonds, as the market priced in a soft (or no) landing scenario off the back of cooling inflation and a less hawkish Federal Reserve. Whilst the market has rallied higher, we are not as confident that the all clear can be sounded on recession risks. Corporations and households built strong defences against Fed tightening following the pandemic, accumulating large cash reserves and locking in low interest rates on 30 year mortgages and longer term corporate bonds. These positive buffers, however, are declining. Households will soon exhaust their excess savings, while significantly higher interest rates which have become a constraint on new borrowing will create refinancing issues. We think this cycle may be a case of this time is longer rather than this time is different with regards to the lagged impact of aggressive Fed tightening on the U.S. economy. Recession in 2024 might be avoided, but the risks are elevated.

Slowing jobs growth and declining inflation are signs the economy has begun to cool. The good news is that the Fed has probably finished lifting interest rates and may likely contemplate easing during the first half of the year. It also means, however, that we are entering a period of heightened uncertainty as investors debate whether recession can be avoided. It may appear for a time that the U.S. economy has achieved a soft landing, but this could be a waypoint on the path to a mild recession later in 2024.

Slower economic growth and the threat of recession provide a cautious equity market backdrop. The S&P 500 Index is expensive with a forward price to earnings ratio of close to 20 times as of December 2023 and has priced a soft landing cycle view based on double digit earnings growth expectations. Asymmetry seems the best description of the outlook, with significant upside only if both the economy and earnings beat already optimistic expectations. Our concerns about elevated recessions risks make us worried about downside potential. The likelihood, however, of rapid Fed easing in the face of recession fears should limit the magnitude of market declines and set the stage for an eventual rebound.

We expect that 2024 will be the transition year that the consensus anticipated for 2023. The over pessimism about 2023 has become over optimism for 2024. We are in a twilight zone between slowdown, possible recession, and recovery where nothing is likely to be quite what it seems.

We retain the same themes as recent months, i.e. a cautious view on risk assets, a preference for government bonds, and a preference for less expensive equity markets versus US equities.
